INSTITUTION BUILDINGS THROUGH EU/NATO PROCESS: SHARED SOCIETIES AND VALUES PROGRESS AND POLICIES

European Union and NATO started as a projects whose main strength were the values that they stand after. The values that are complementary with shared society and values concept are simply defined as “united in diversity”.

EU enlargement, so far, has been the best political, economic, security and social success of EU not only for enlarged countries but for EU founding countries as well.

Two question, among others, remains.

First, how far all these countries became more shared societies and values based environments and how that can be measured, monitored and managed?

Second, what are the achievements of EU/NATO process in this context and what to do with further strengthening and speeding up Enlargement and in what directions?

There are lively debates about where and how democracy needs to develop further at a global level. It concerns developed as well as developing democracies. One of the issues that is central to those debates is the status of values in a society. What values are inherent to a democratic society, and how those values can be shared globally, but also within individual societies? In order to be able to join the family of developed democracies, particularly through EU accession, countries like BiH will need to invest more efforts in values it needs to share within a broader democratic context.

The new EU strategy for Bosnia and Herzegovina and regional approach to western Balkans can be powerful tool for transition to a modern shared society. Within the EU context, the values of democracy, equality and diversity are integrated in the Copenhagen criteria. The Copenhagen criteria and values it embraces are the foundation of the EU's strategies and initiatives in BiH and all enlarging countries.

QUESTIONS TO ADDRESS

1. What are the major transformative powers to shared societies and values of EU and NATO accession process and what is needed outside that framework?
2. What were the biggest obstacles in previous wave of enlargement and what are the current ones?
3. What type of leadership in order to mobilize key stakeholders of society was needed then and what are the required ones now?
4. What is the relation of quality of institutions with the shared society and values reality and what is the role of government in this process?
5. What would you do differently and what do you think that shared society and values key transformation stakeholders should do today?

6. Who are the key players and their roles in transformation process to shared society and values?
7. How can we measure success/failure of path, speed and results on a road to shared society and values?
8. What are the key roles of local and international (bilateral and multilateral) players in transformative processes?
9. Is there alternative or why should we go in direction of shared society and values?
10. Where will we (accession and eastern countries as well as EU) be in 2020? What are the challenges and options?
11. What is the role of international community's institutions in

B&H and in transformation on nation building process in general regarding shared societies and values concept?

12. How would you assess the level of shared societies and values concept's presence in today's European countries?
